A Lesson In Natural History. An indulgent grandfather was entertaining his grandchildren by turning the leaves of a book on animals. Coming to the kangaroo, he called their attention to its peculiarities and especially to its enormous tail. Passing on, after awhile he thought he would try them to see how much they remembered of this talk about the kangaroo. He asked, "What anima! has the biggest tail?" After a moment's thought one little girl spoke up, "I know, a snake; it's all tail." - Indianapolis
